WOMEN IN THE GLOBAL COMMUNITY

A "quiet revolution" in women's lives is occurring across the world. Women's roles in society are changing dramatically. More and more women are assuming leadership roles in some of the most future-oriented sectors of their societies. Information technology, business administration, finance and medicine/public health and higher education are increasingly attracting their talents. This transformation of roles will have an impact in the future on democratization, economic liberalization and the development and evolution of vibrant, inclusive civil societies.

The Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs of the U.S. Department of State in cooperation with Bogazici University is sponsoring a Fulbright conference for interested government officials, NGOs, the business community, academics and students, including Fulbright, Humphrey and Eisenhower grantees and alumni to be held in Istanbul on the university campus in Bebek.

Panel presentations and participant discussions in breakaway sessions will be in the following broad areas:

- Education
- Information and Communication Technologies
- Economic Policy
- Public Health
- Civil Society, War and Peace, and the Political Role of Women
- Culture and Ethnicity
- Country-specific Panels: Afghanistan, Egypt, Tunisia and Turkey
